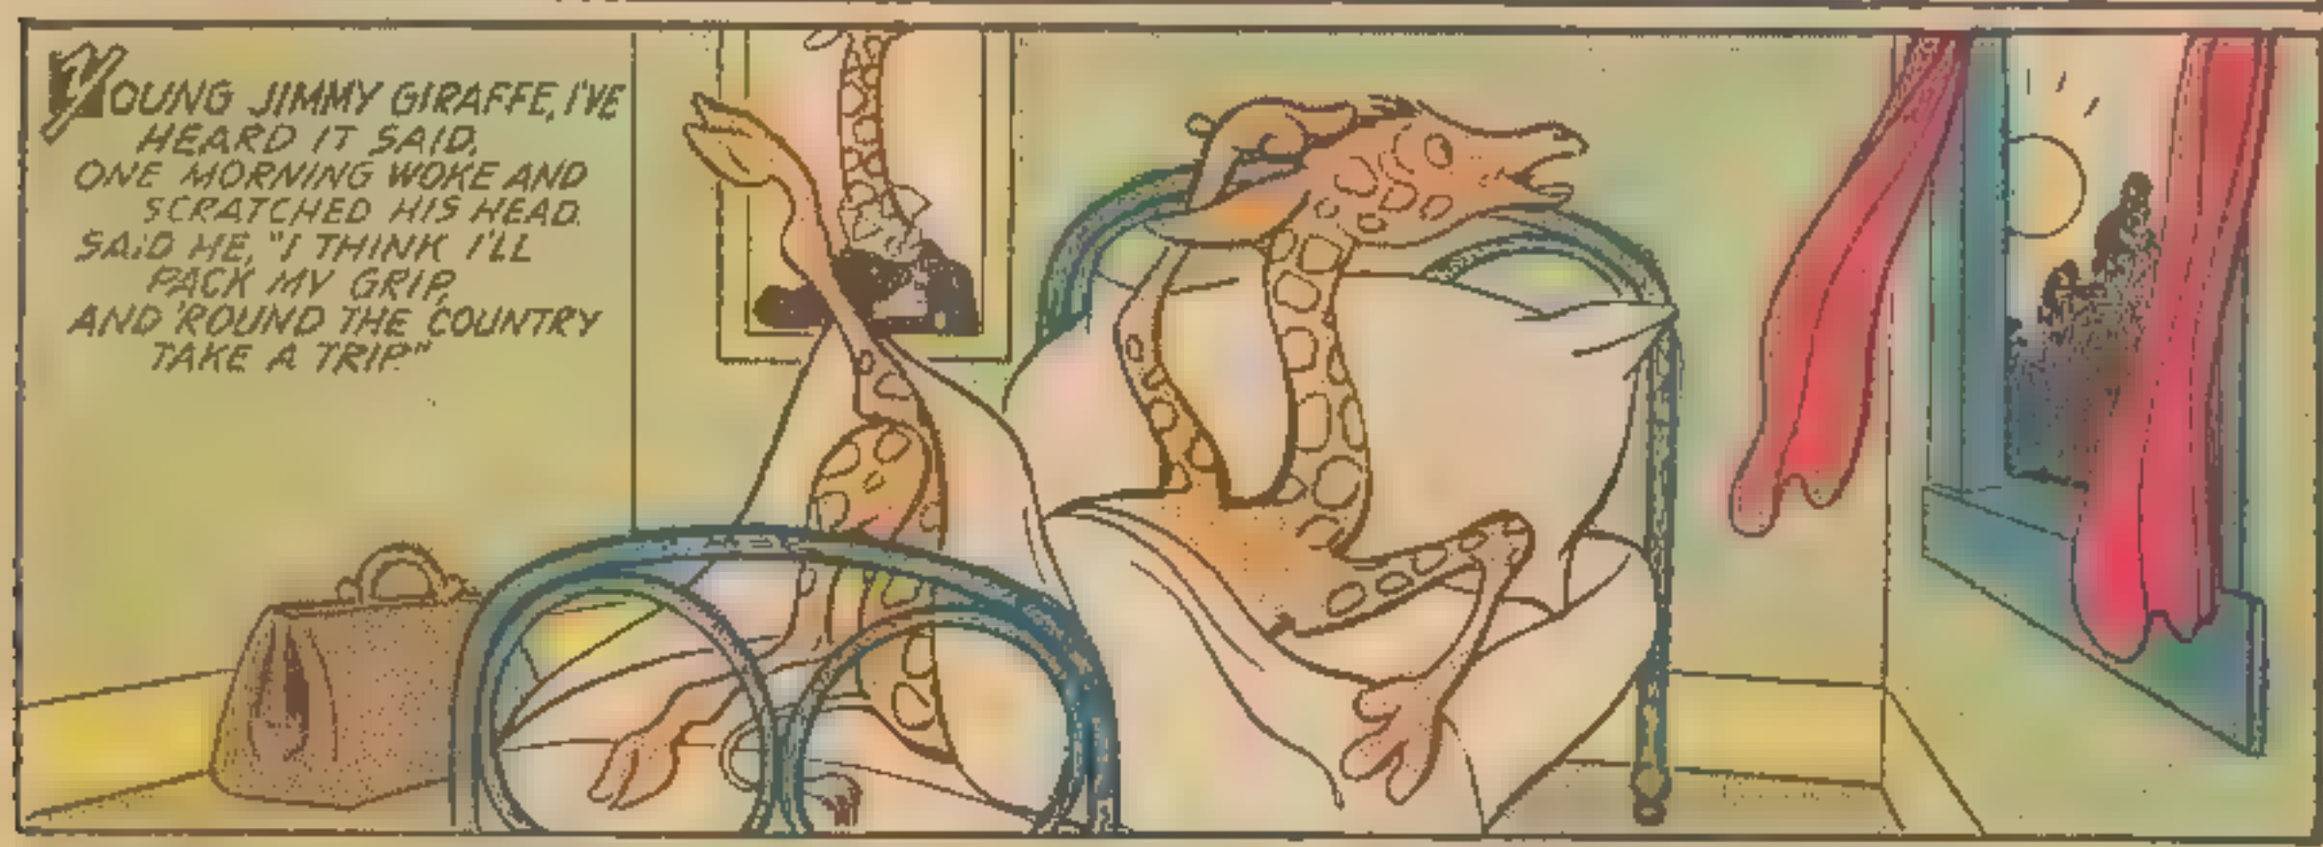
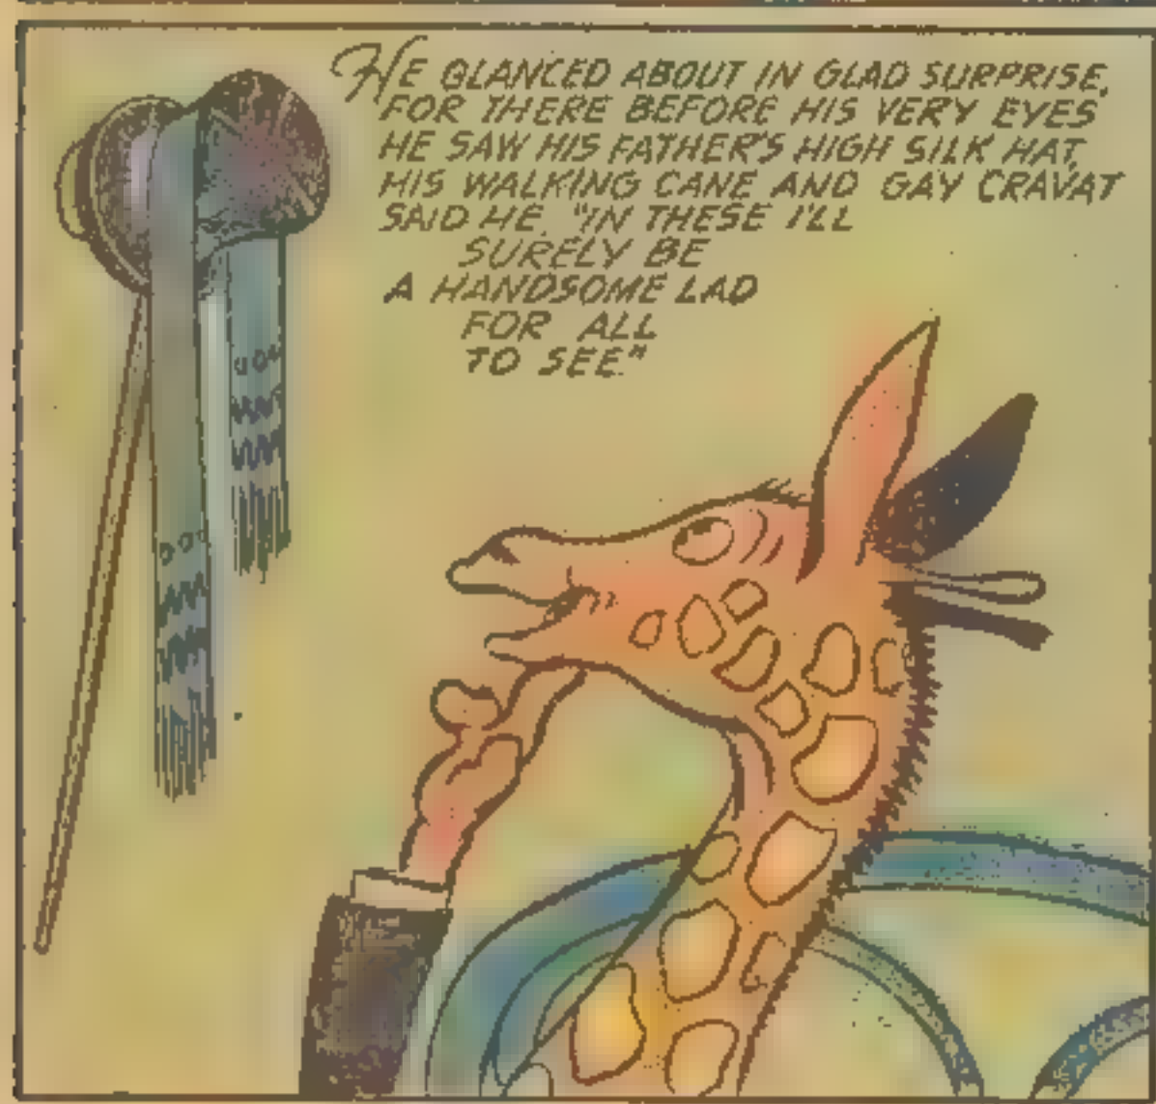
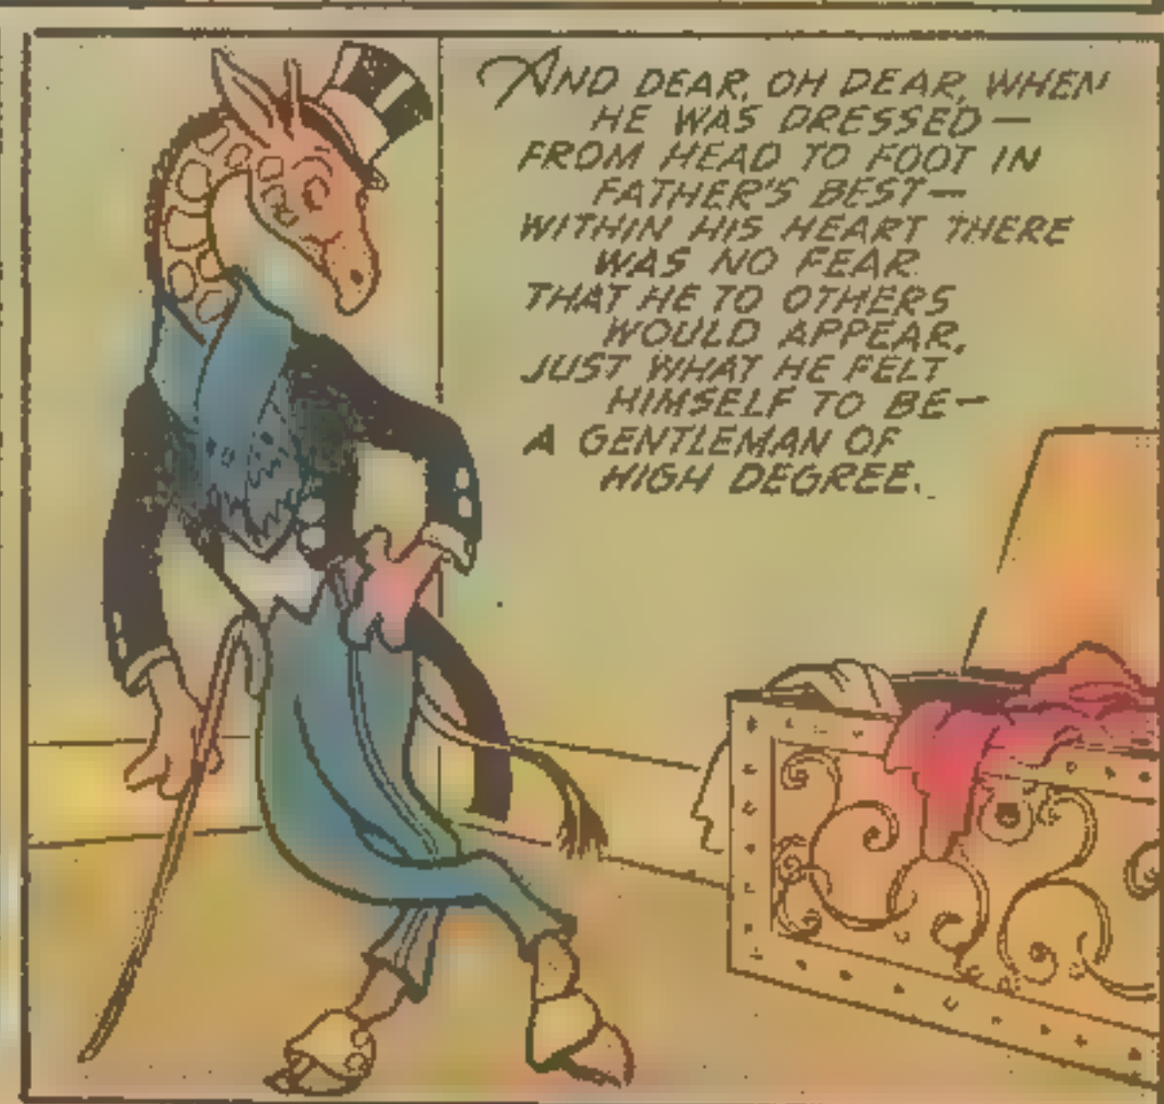
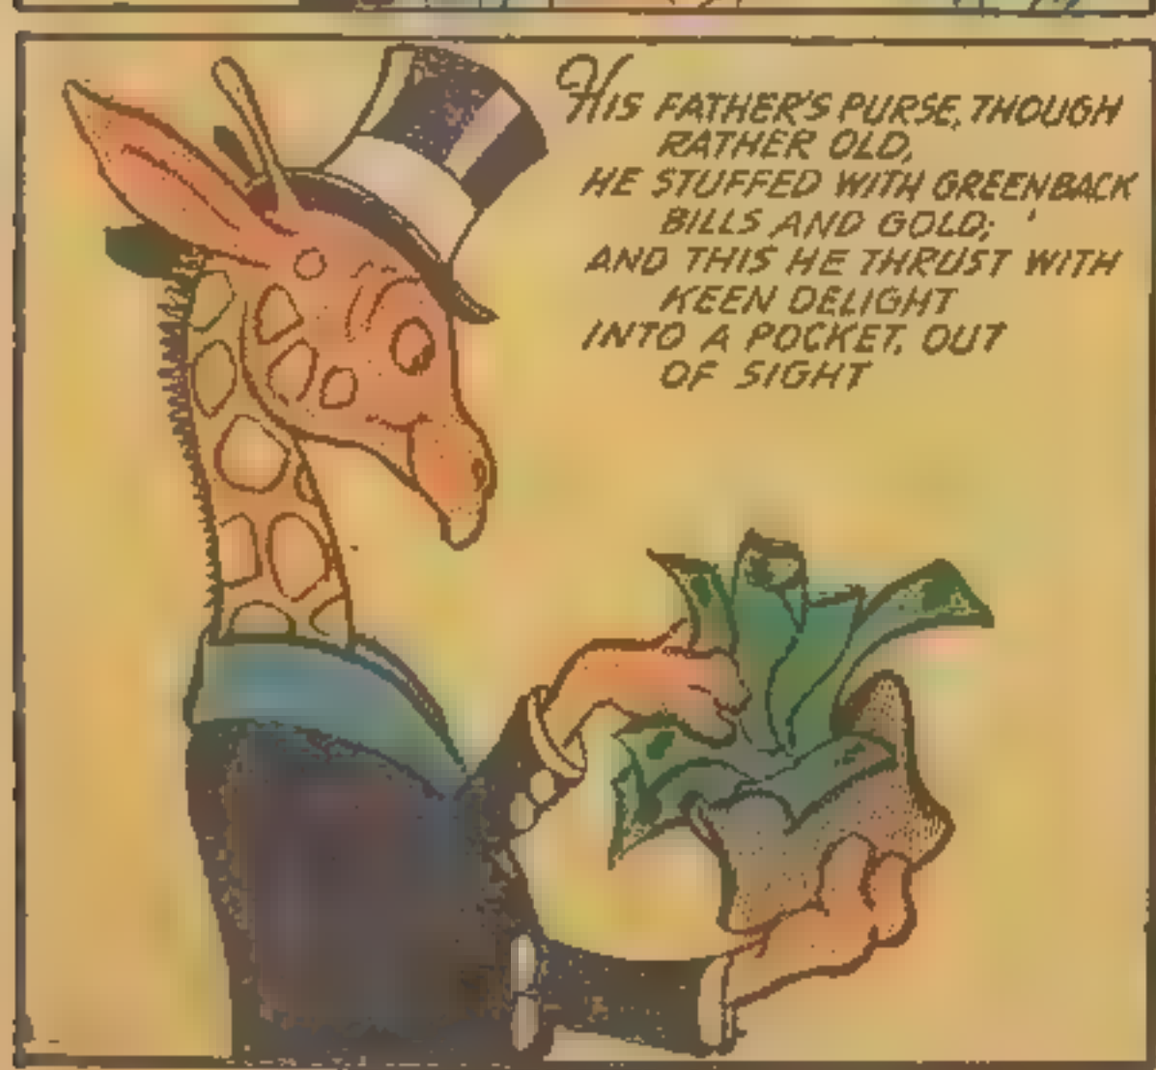
The RUNAWAY GIRAFFE

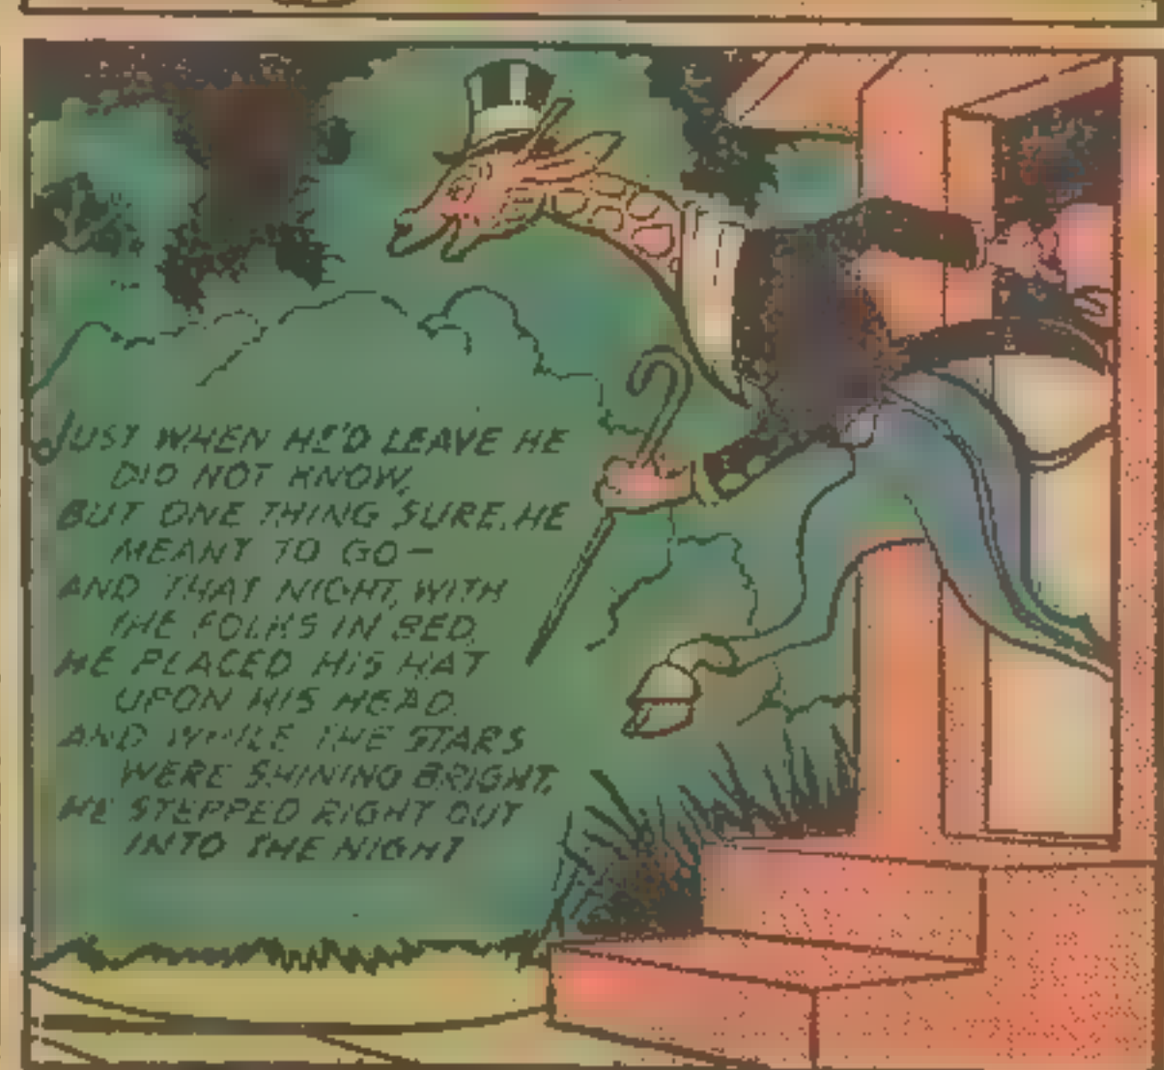
Copr 1946 by OSKAR LEBECK

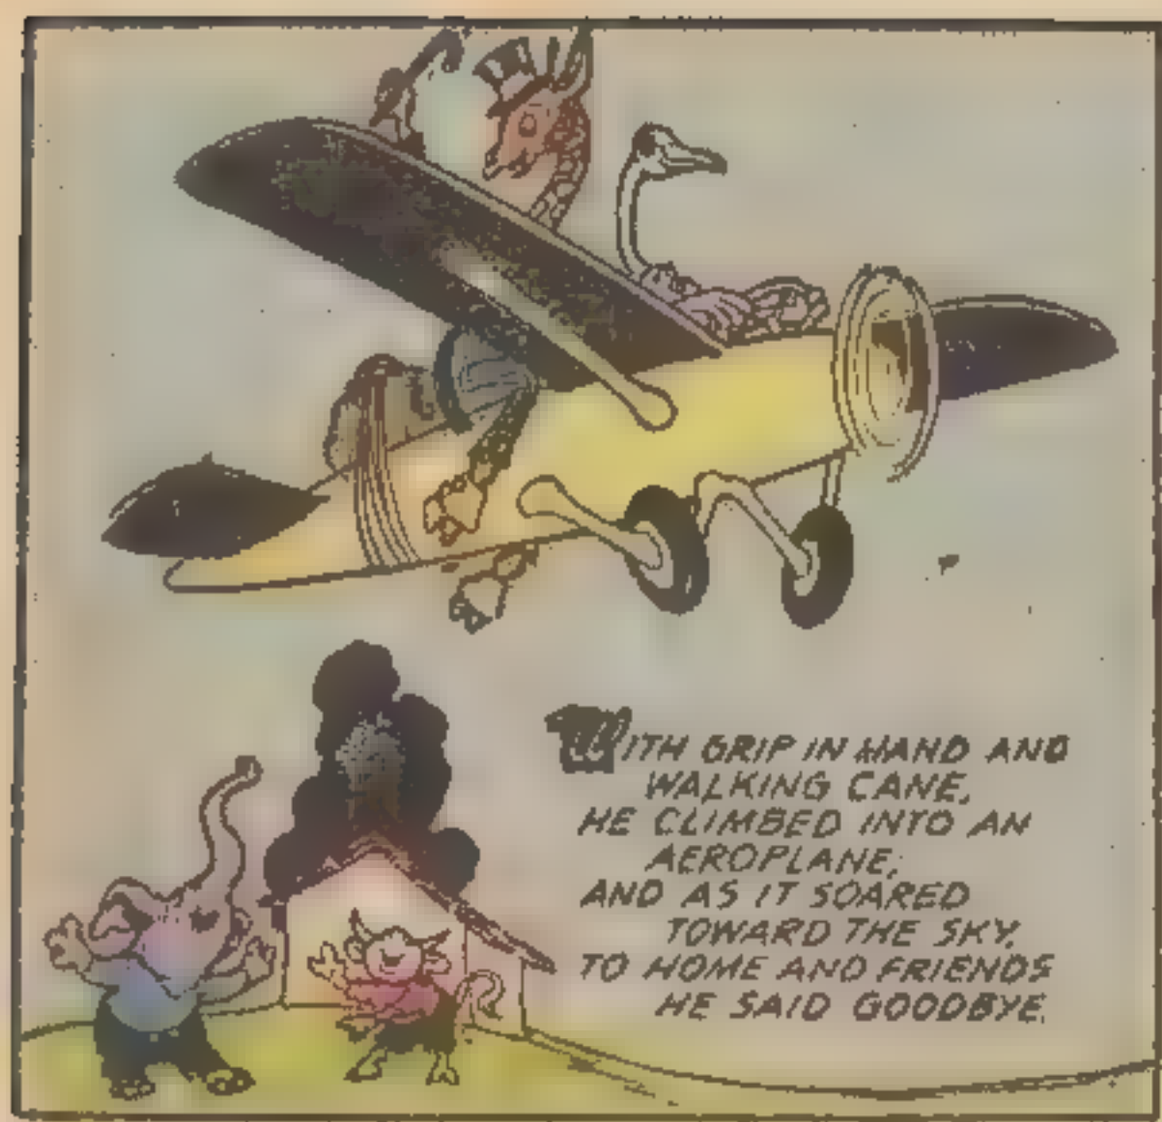




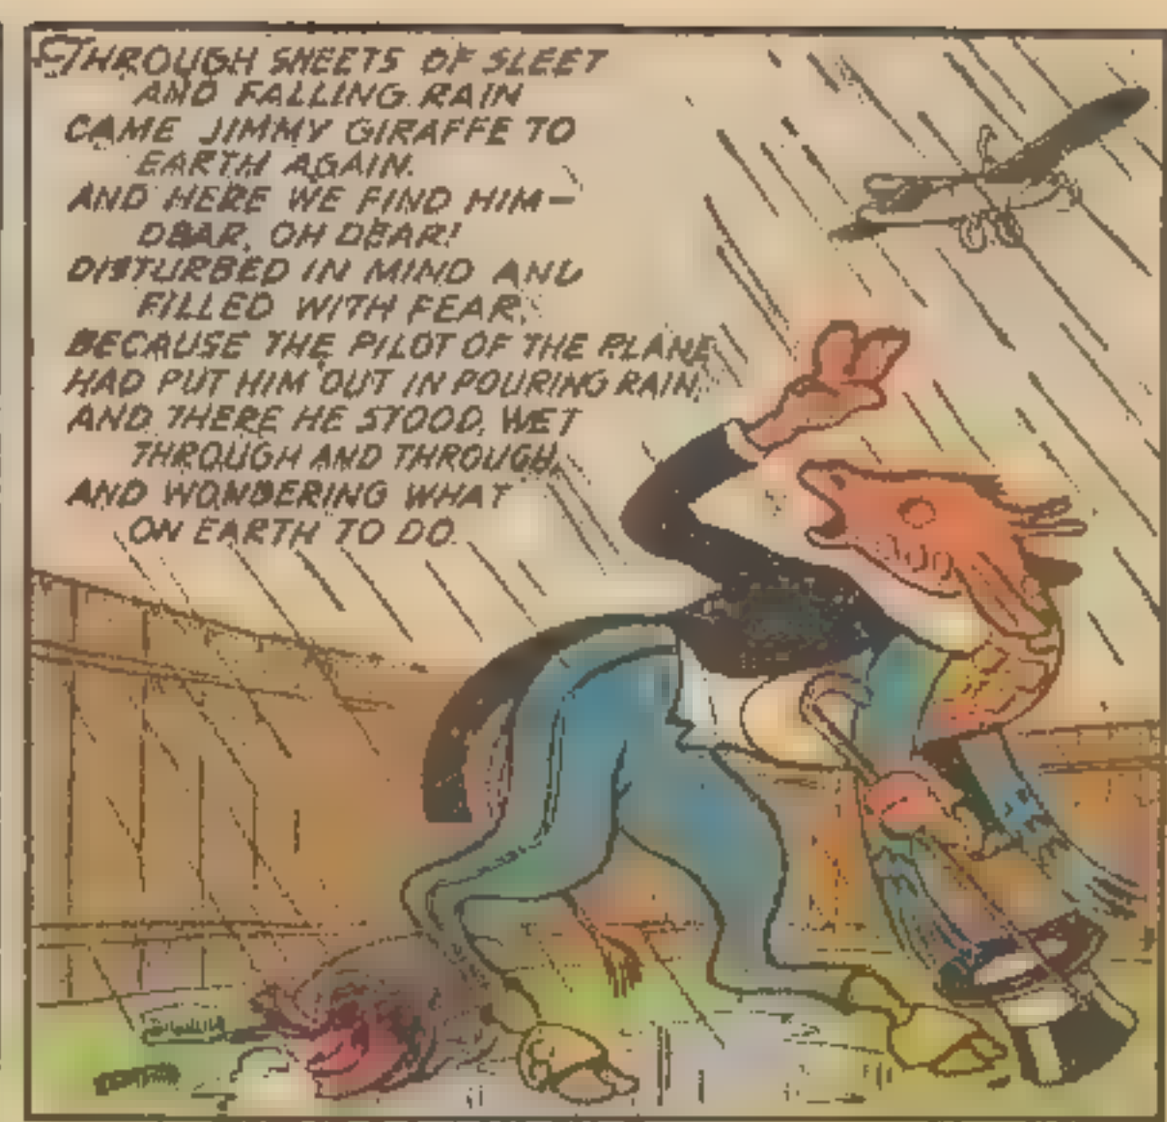




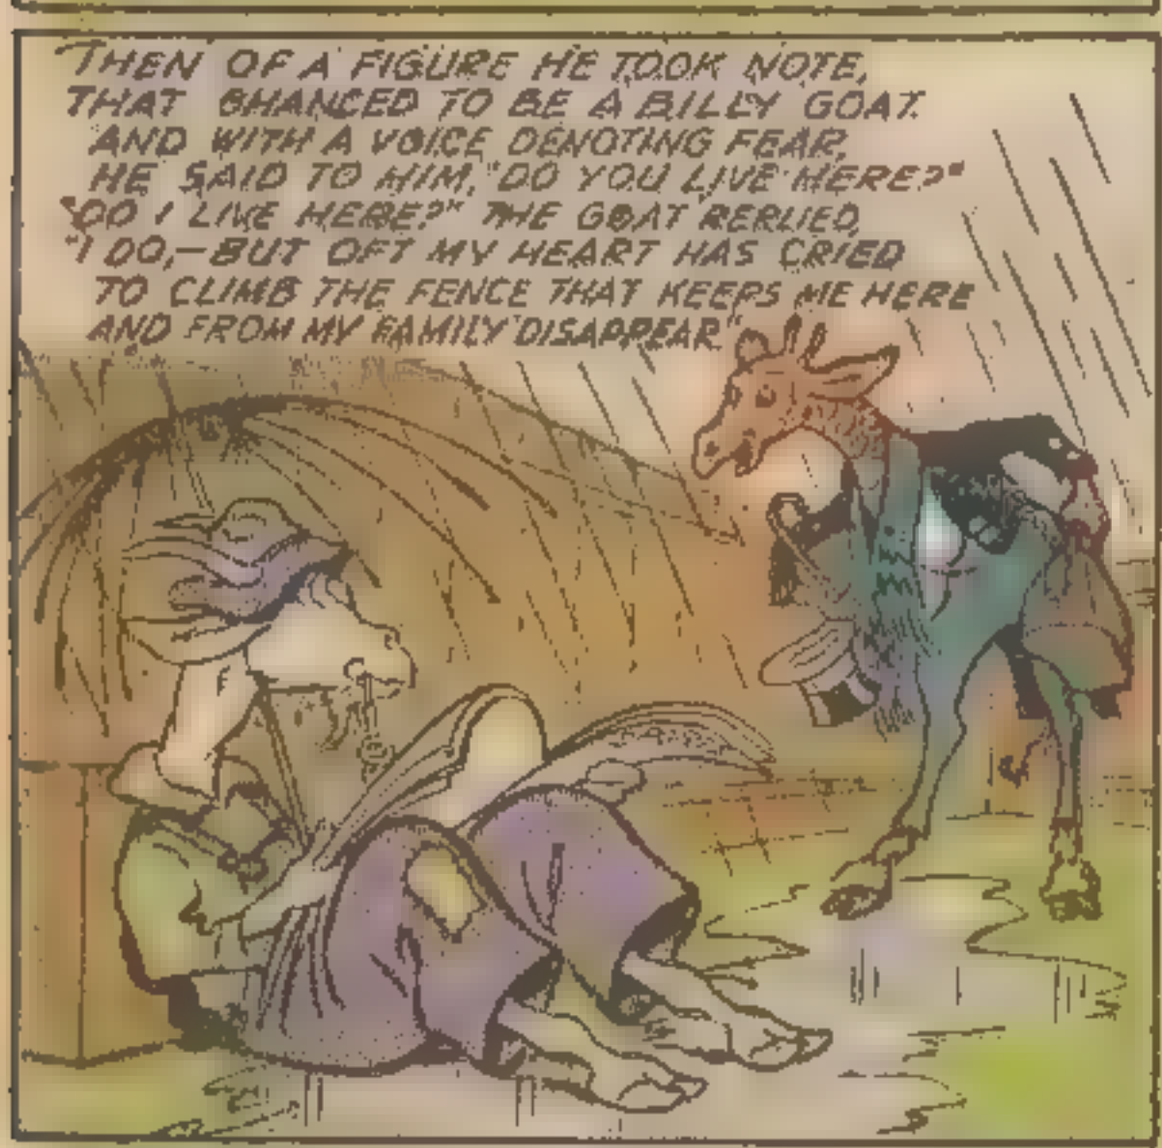




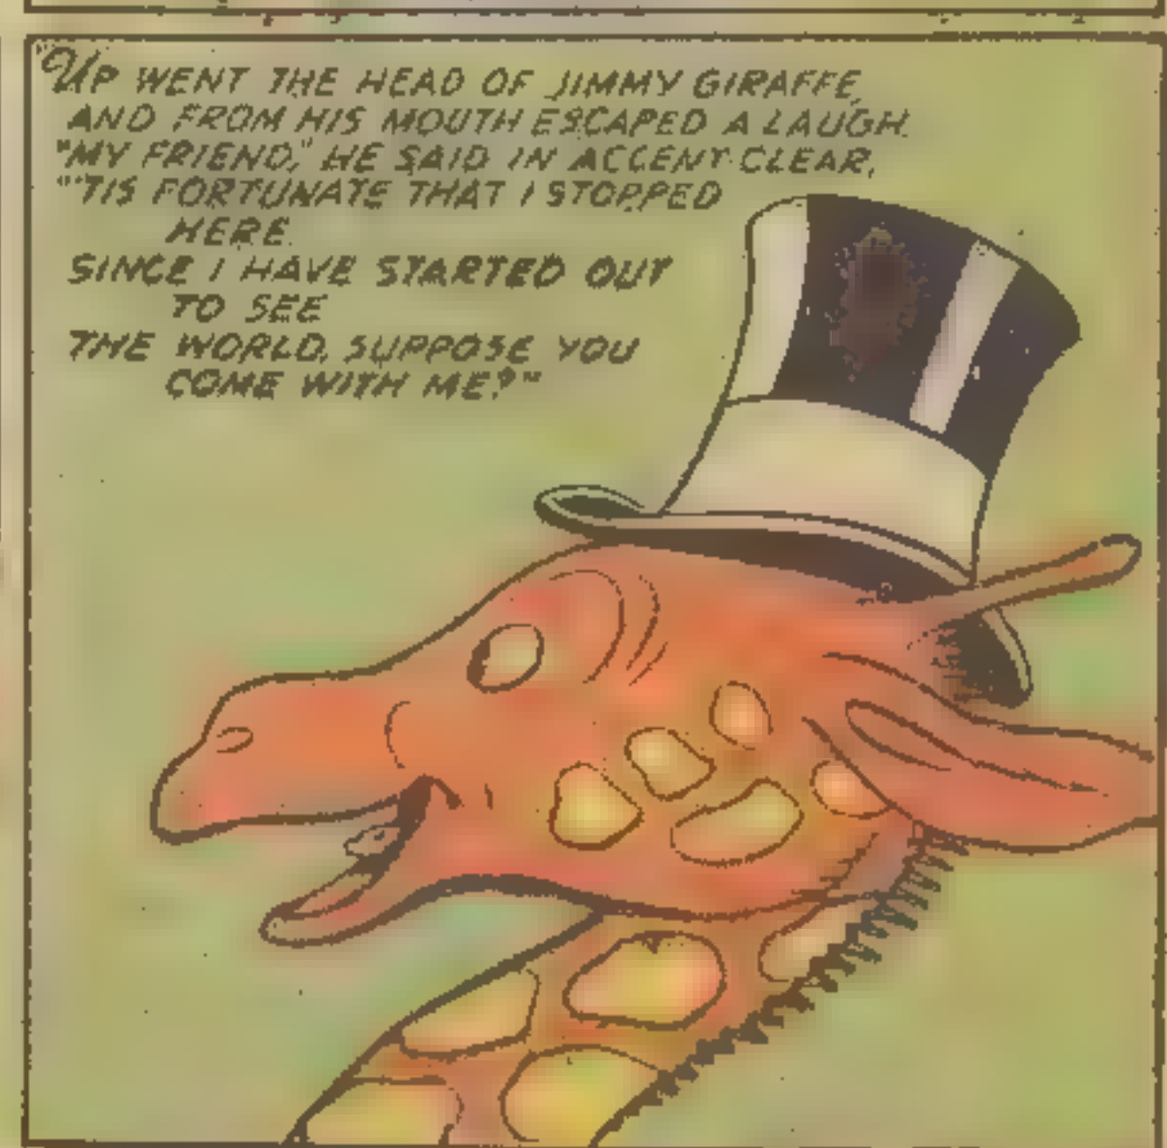
WITH GRIP IN HAND AND WALKING CANE, HE CLIMBED INTO AN AEROPLANE, AND AS IT SOARED TOWARD THE SKY, TO HOME AND FRIENDS HE SAID GOODBYE.



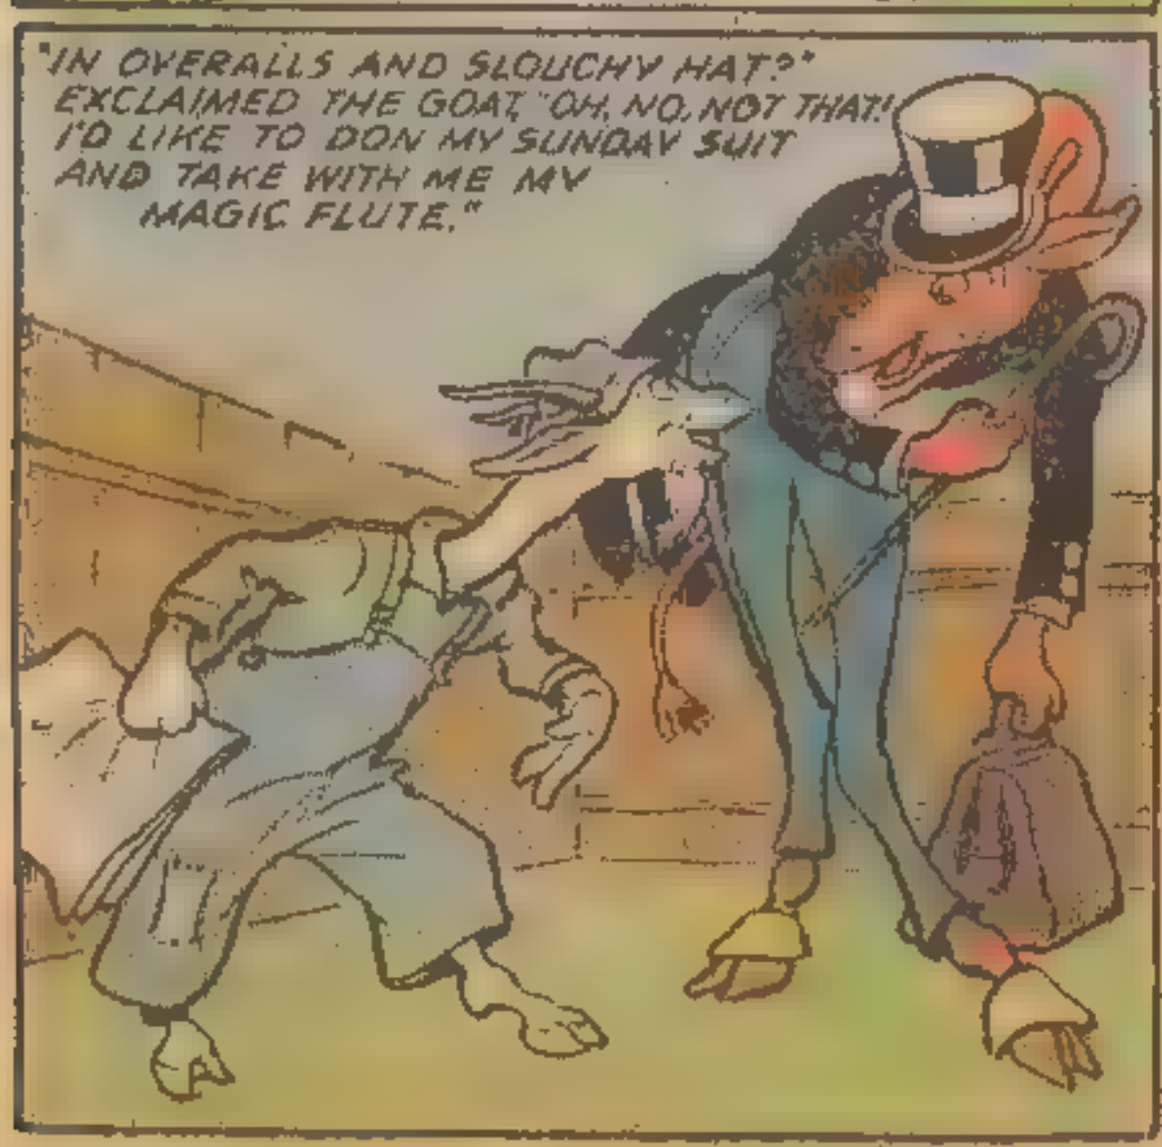
THROUGH SHEETS OF SLEET AND FALLING RAIN CAME JIMMY GIRAFFE TO EARTH AGAIN. AND HERE WE FIND HIM— DEAR, OH DEAR! DISTURBED IN MIND AND FILLED WITH FEAR, BECAUSE THE PILOT OF THE PLANE HAD PUT HIM OUT IN POURING RAIN. AND THERE HE STOOD, WET THROUGH AND THROUGH, AND WONDERING WHAT ON EARTH TO DO.



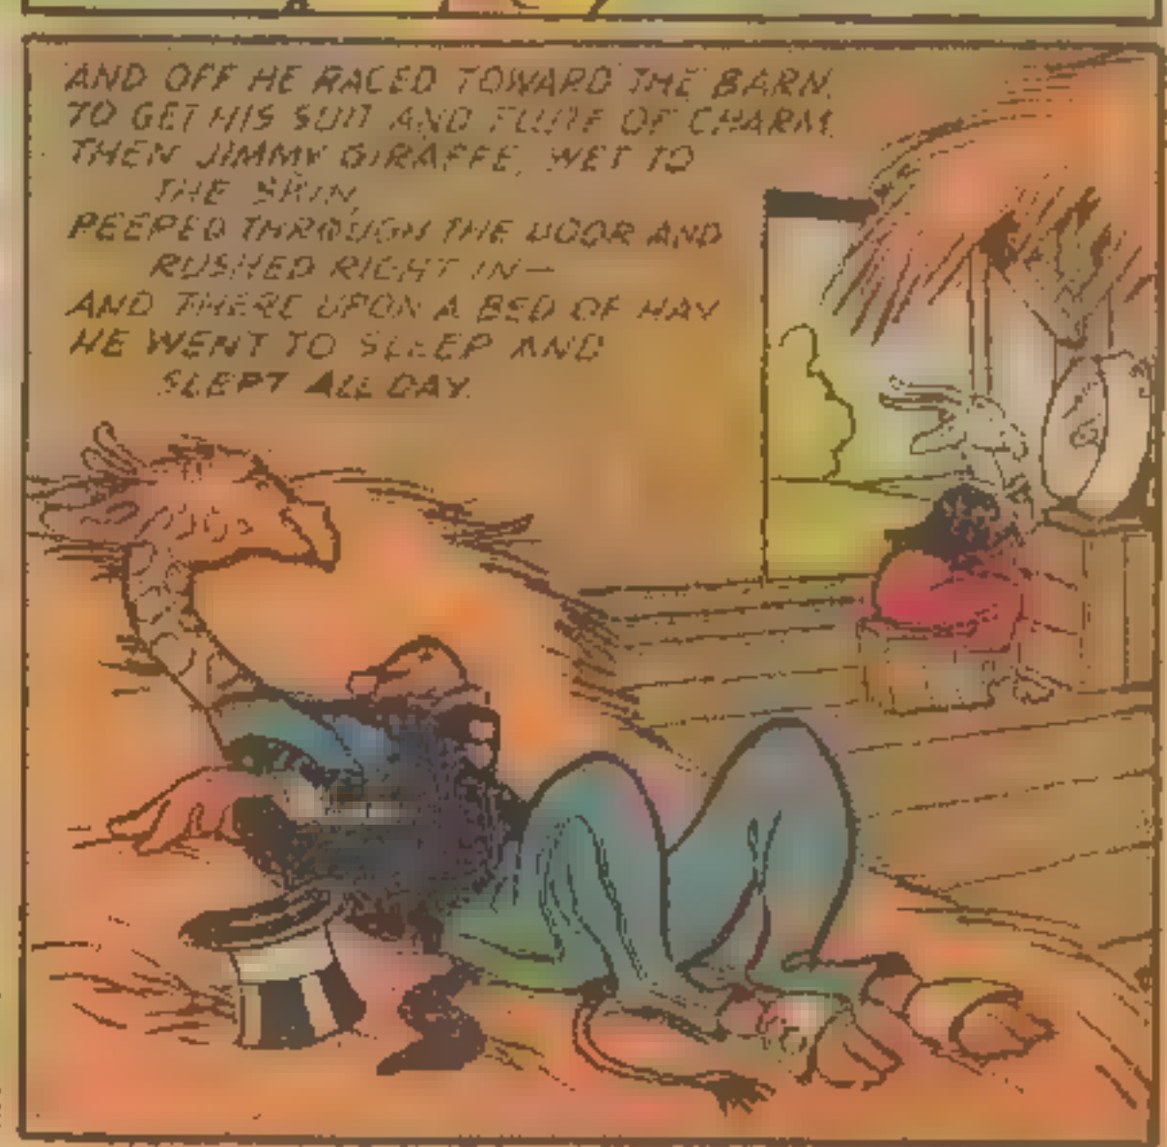
THEN OF A FIGURE HE TOOK NOTE, THAT CHANCED TO BE A BILLY GOAT. AND WITH A VOICE DENOTING FEAR, HE SAID TO HIM, "DO YOU LIVE HERE?" "DO I LIVE HERE?" THE GOAT REPLIED, "I DO,—BUT OFT MY HEART HAS CRIED TO CLIMB THE FENCE THAT KEEPS ME HERE AND FROM MY FAMILY DISAPPEAR."



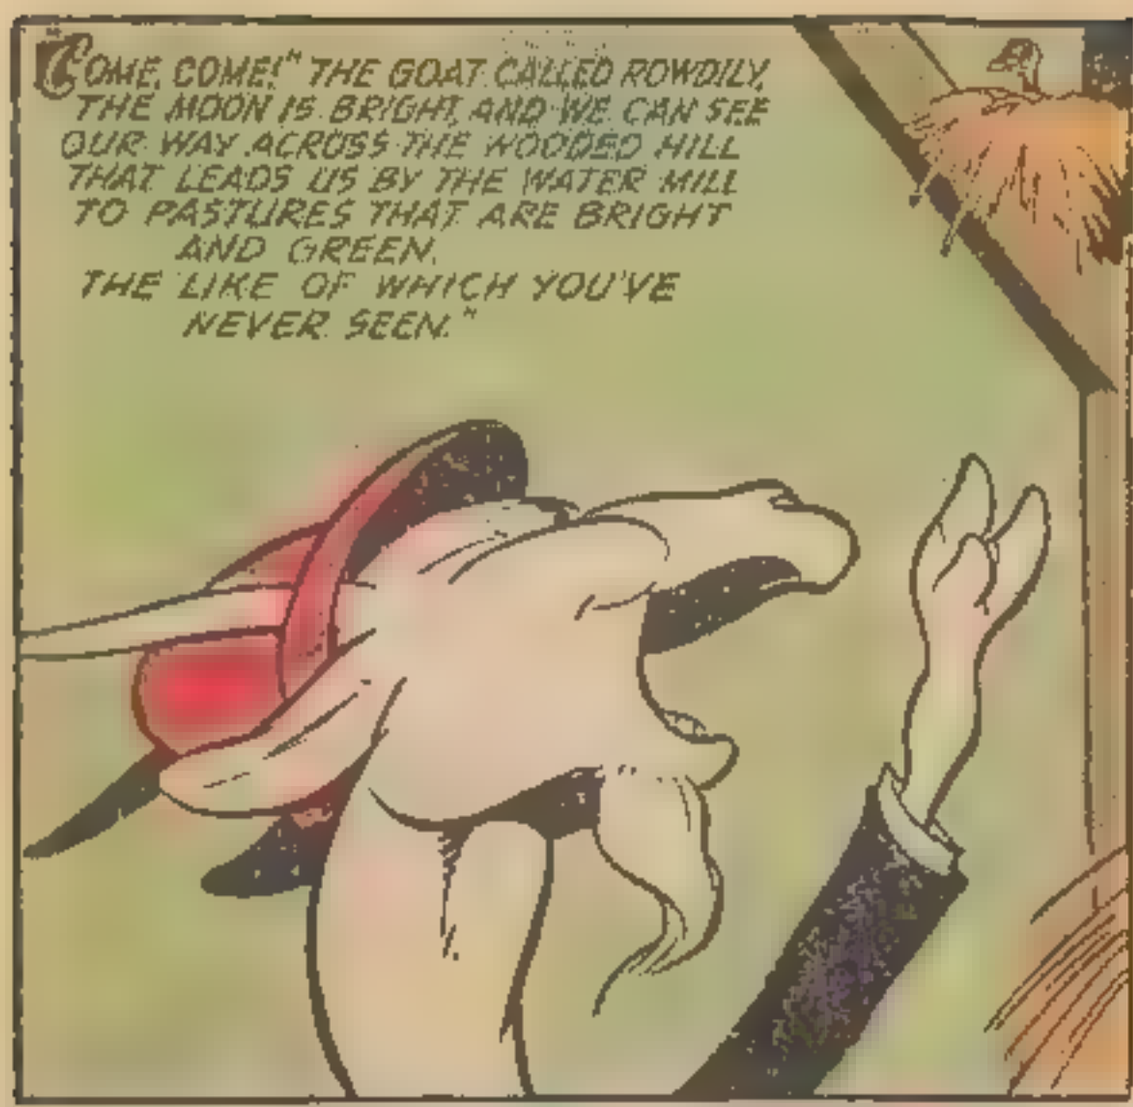
UP WENT THE HEAD OF JIMMY GIRAFFE, AND FROM HIS MOUTH ESCAPED A LAUGH. "MY FRIEND," HE SAID IN ACCENT CLEAR, "'TIS FORTUNATE THAT I STOPPED HERE. SINCE I HAVE STARTED OUT TO SEE THE WORLD, SUPPOSE YOU COME WITH ME?"



"IN OVERALLS AND SLOUCHY HAT?" EXCLAIMED THE GOAT, "OH, NO, NOT THAT! I'D LIKE TO DON MY SUNDAY SUIT AND TAKE WITH ME MY MAGIC FLUTE."



AND OFF HE RACED TOWARD THE BARN, TO GET HIS SUIT AND FLUTE OF CHARM. THEN JIMMY GIRAFFE, WET TO THE SKIN, PEEPED THROUGH THE DOOR AND RUSHED RIGHT IN— AND THERE UPON A BED OF HAY HE WENT TO SLEEP AND SLEPT ALL DAY.



"COME, COME!" THE GOAT CALLED ROWDILY,
THE MOON IS BRIGHT AND WE CAN SEE
OUR WAY ACROSS THE WOODED HILL
THAT LEADS US BY THE WATER MILL
TO PASTURES THAT ARE BRIGHT AND GREEN,
THE LIKE OF WHICH YOU'VE NEVER SEEN."

THEN JIMMY GIRAFFE
LAUGHED LOUD AND GAY,
WHILE FROM HIS CLOTHES HE SHOOK THE HAY AND THEN HE DONNED HIS FATHER'S COAT AND TURNED TOWARD YOUNG
BILLY, THE GOAT

"LEAD ON, KIND FRIEND," HE SAID IN GLEE,
"AND I WILL KEEP YOU COMPANY.
BUT IN MY HEART I WILL ADMIT, THAT FLUTE—I'D LIKE TO CARRY IT
BECAUSE, SOMEHOW, I SEEM TO KNOW
WE'LL NEED IT AS WE ONWARD GO."

ARMED WITH A FLUTE AND WALKING CANE,
THEY STARTED DOWN
A WINDING LANE.
BUT, ERE THEY PASSED
THE WATER MILL,
THEY HEARD A VOICE
UPON THE HILL
SHRIEK NOISILY, "WHO—WHOO—ARE YOU?"
AND NEITHER KNEW NOT WHAT TO DO!

THEN JIMMY GIRAFFE, WITH SPIRIT GAY,
UPON THE FLUTE BEGAN TO PLAY.
AND PRESENTLY, IN FEATHERED GOWN,
FROM OVERHEAD AN OWL
FLEW DOWN.
AND THERE, WITH EYES OF GLEAMING JET,
HE DANCED A STATELY MINUET.

SAID BILLY THE GOAT TO JIMMY
GIRAFFE,
"SOMETIMES I CANNOT HELP BUT LAUGH,
WHEN I THINK OF PLACES
WE HAVE BEEN,
AND ALL THE FUNNY FOLKS WE'VE SEEN."

"THE THINGS WE'VE SEEN AND WHERE WE'VE GONE, SAID JIMMY GIRAFFE, "IS LIKE A SONG.
BUT WASN'T IT ONLY YESTERDAY
YOU SAID THAT YOU WOULD LEAD THE WAY
TO THE HOUSE THAT SHELTERS
JENNY WREN,
OR MAYBE TO A LION'S DEN?"

"I DID," SAID BILLY THE GOAT, "AND HOW!
I'LL MAKE THAT PROMISE
GOOD RIGHT NOW.
THE HOME THAT SHELTERS
JENNY WREN
IS NEAR AT HAND IN THIS GREEN GLEN.
AND IF YOU'LL ONLY FOLLOW ME,
PERHAPS SHE'LL ASK US IN TO TEA."

BUT JENNY WREN
WAS NOT AT HOME,
SO BILLY THE GOAT SAID,
"LET'S MOVE ON."
SO ON THEY MOVED THROUGH FORESTS DEEP
IN SEARCH OF SOME SAFE
PLACE TO SLEEP.
Have gone warming in the soil for a tasty stew to boil.
Will return here if and when I am lucky.
— Jenny Wren

BUT NIGHTTIME
CAUGHT THEM IN THE GLEN-AND RIGHT BESIDE THE LION'S DEN!
AND WHEN HE SAW THEM
HE GOT SORE,
AND SHOWED UP WITH AN AWFUL ROAR.

SAID BILLY
THE GOAT,
"I GREATLY
FEAR
OUR PRESENCE
ISN'T WANTED
THEN JIMMY
GIRAFFE, IN DIRE DISMAY,
UPON THE FLUTE BEGAN TO PLAY:

AND PRESENTLY THE
ANGRY BEAST WAS ASKING THEM TO HAVE A FEAST
ALONG WITH HIM ON HOME-MADE BREAD, WITH MAPLE SYRUP THICKLY SPREAD

LITTLE HAPPY HONEY BEAR

Copr. 1946 by R. S. CALLENDER

Little Happy Honey Bear was very, very hungry. He felt as though he hadn't eaten for the longest time. And he hadn't, for he had wandered far away from the berry patch where he usually got his meals, and there was no one to tell him what else to eat, because he was an orphan.

"Maybe I could eat some roots," he thought. So he tried a few roots, but they were very bitter. They didn't taste good at all. "Gosh, they're awful," he said and started looking for a brook so he could get the bitterness out of his mouth. When he came to the brook there was Curly Cinnamon Bear nibbling on some bushes.

"These must be good to eat," said Happy. He picked out a very appetizing looking plant and started to nibble. But almost as soon as he had started Curly Cinnamon Bear looked up and saw him.

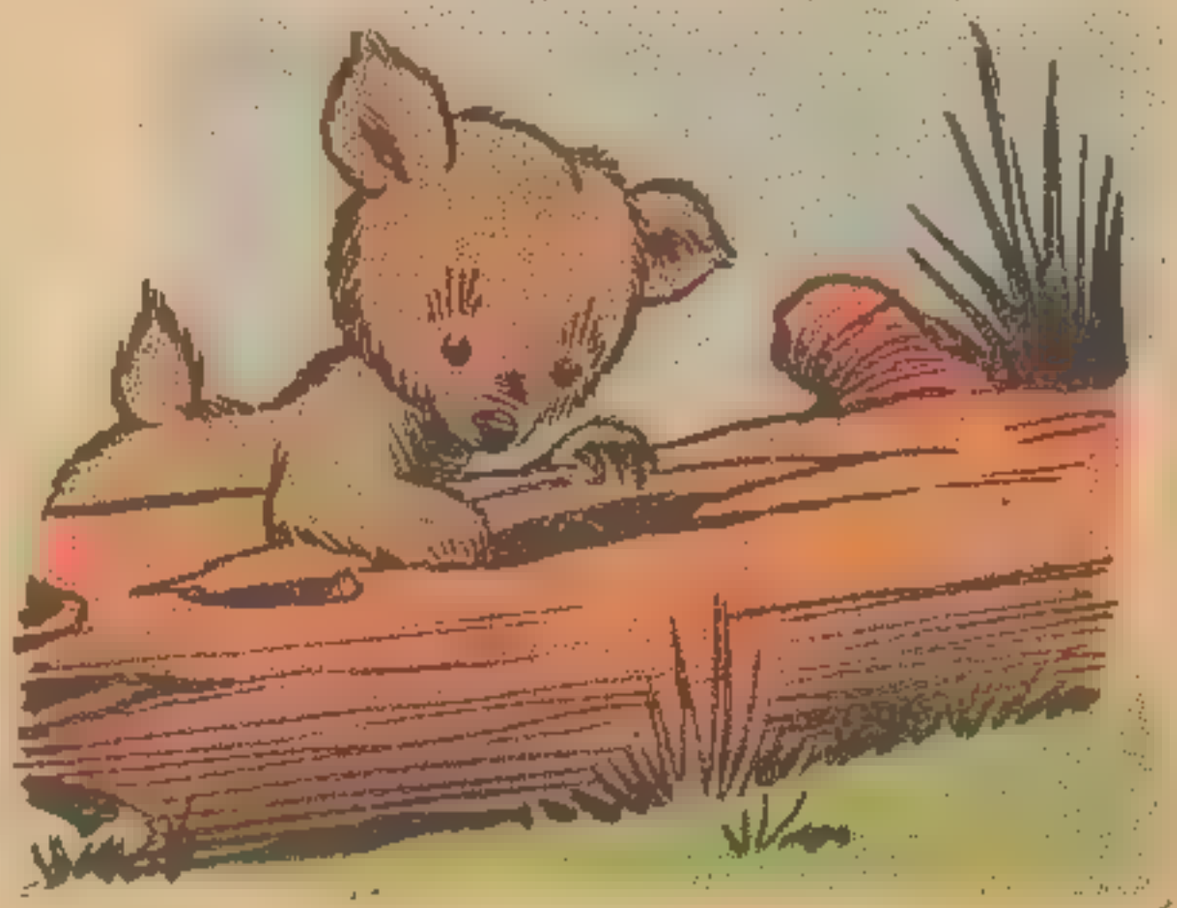
"Here! What are you doing in my cinnamon patch?" he demanded.

Happy Honey Bear was so surprised that he stopped at once. "I'm hungry. I saw you eating here so I thought these bushes must be good for bears to eat."

"These are cinnamon sticks and they're for Cinnamon Bears. You don't look like a Cinnamon Bear."

"Oh, I'm not," said Happy. "I'm a Honey Bear, and my name is Happy Honey Bear."

Curly Cinnamon Bear almost doubled up with laughter. "Ha-ha! Imagine that . . . a Honey Bear eating cinnamon sticks." Then he stopped laughing and pointed a paw very sternly at Happy. "Don't you know better than to waste cinnamon sticks? If you're a Honey Bear, go eat honey Now, scoot, and don't let me catch you in the cinnamon patch again."



Off Happy ran just as fast as he could and he didn't stop until he was far away from Curly. "My, what a cross old bear," he thought, when he finally sat down to rest, "but at least I know what to eat now. I wonder where I can find some honey." Then he remembered the picnic grounds. "Now why didn't I think of that before," he said. "The other animals all find lovely things to eat there."

So Happy hurried off, just as fast as he could make his feet go to the big clearing his friends had told him about. There were lots of tables about and on one of them a big lunch was all spread out, and not a soul was about it.

"My that looks good," said Happy, and he walked right over and helped himself. First he had some potato salad and a baloney sandwich; then he reached for a hardboiled egg, but before he had a chance to taste it, the picnickers came back to the table. When they saw a bear at their table, they screamed and yelled so much that Happy got frightened and ran away

The little bear ran and ran. In fact, he didn't stop until wham! he bumped right into Willy Woodchuck and knocked him right over

"I am sorry," said Happy as he helped Willy up, "but you see I was just out looking for some honey and . . ."

"I'm not interested in your troubles," interrupted Willy. "The honey is in the hollow log behind you." And he stalked off into the bushes.

"So that's where it is," said Happy and he poked his head into the hollow of the log. Sniff, sniff, he went and smelled the nicest sweet smell. Then, suddenly, there were a lot of bzzz bzzz bzzz sounds. Happy felt a sharp pain in his nose and another in his ear. He pulled his head out of the hole as fast as he could and the whole logful of bees swarmed out after him and began stinging him all over.

All Happy could think about was getting into a pool of cool water so he raced away to the brook and plunged in right over his head, and he stayed there so long the bees got tired waiting and went back to their log.

When finally Happy started for shore, there on the bank stood a full-grown Honey Bear holding his sides and laughing just as hard as he could.

"Ho ho ho! So you tried to steal some honey?" laughed the big bear. "Well, now that you've had your first lesson, I'll show you how to go about it in the right way."

"No thank you," said Happy, shaking himself "I'm going to find my berry patch again, if it takes me a week! And if I don't find it, I'm going to be a Cinnamon Bear and live on cinnamon sticks!"

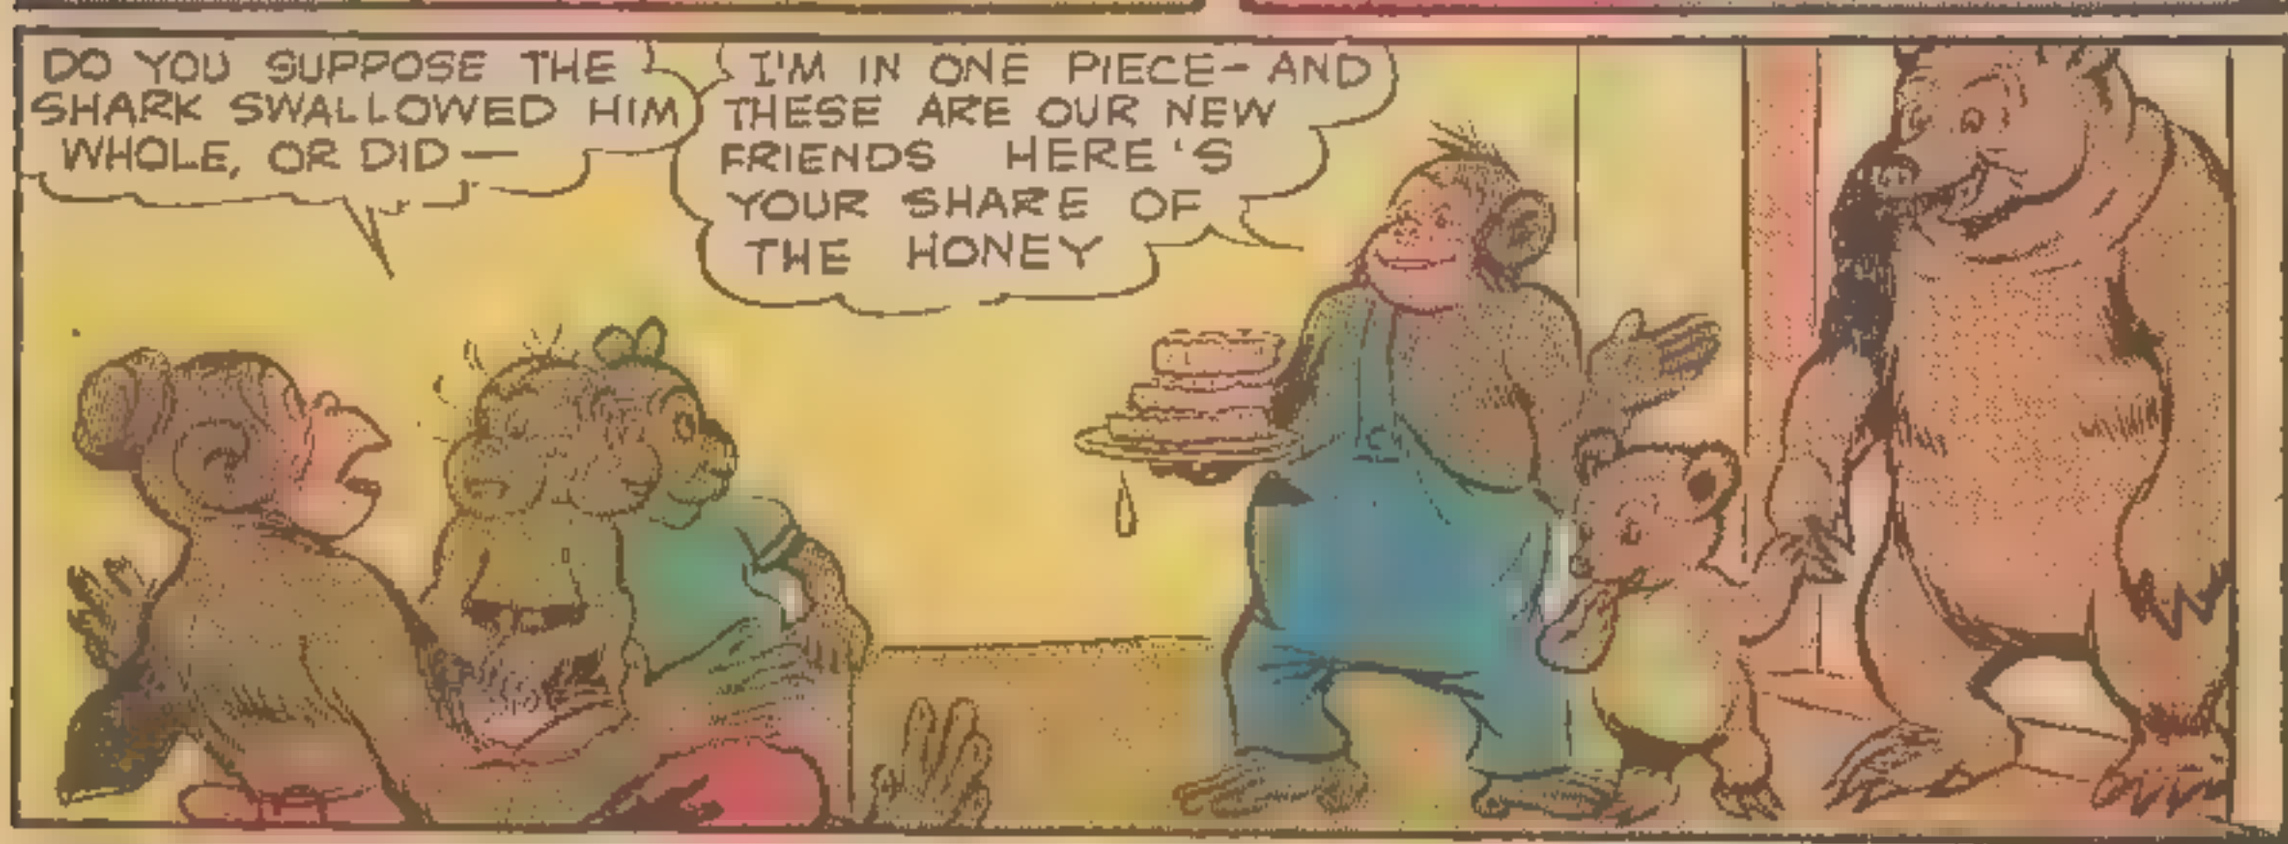
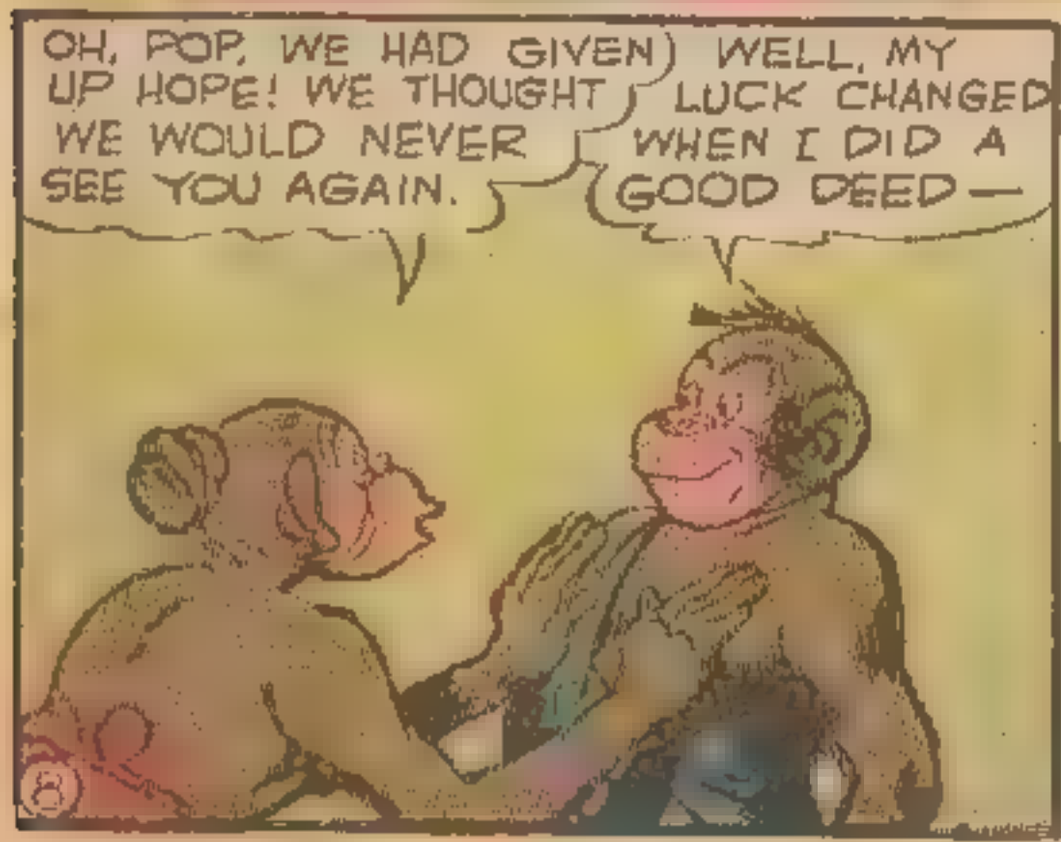
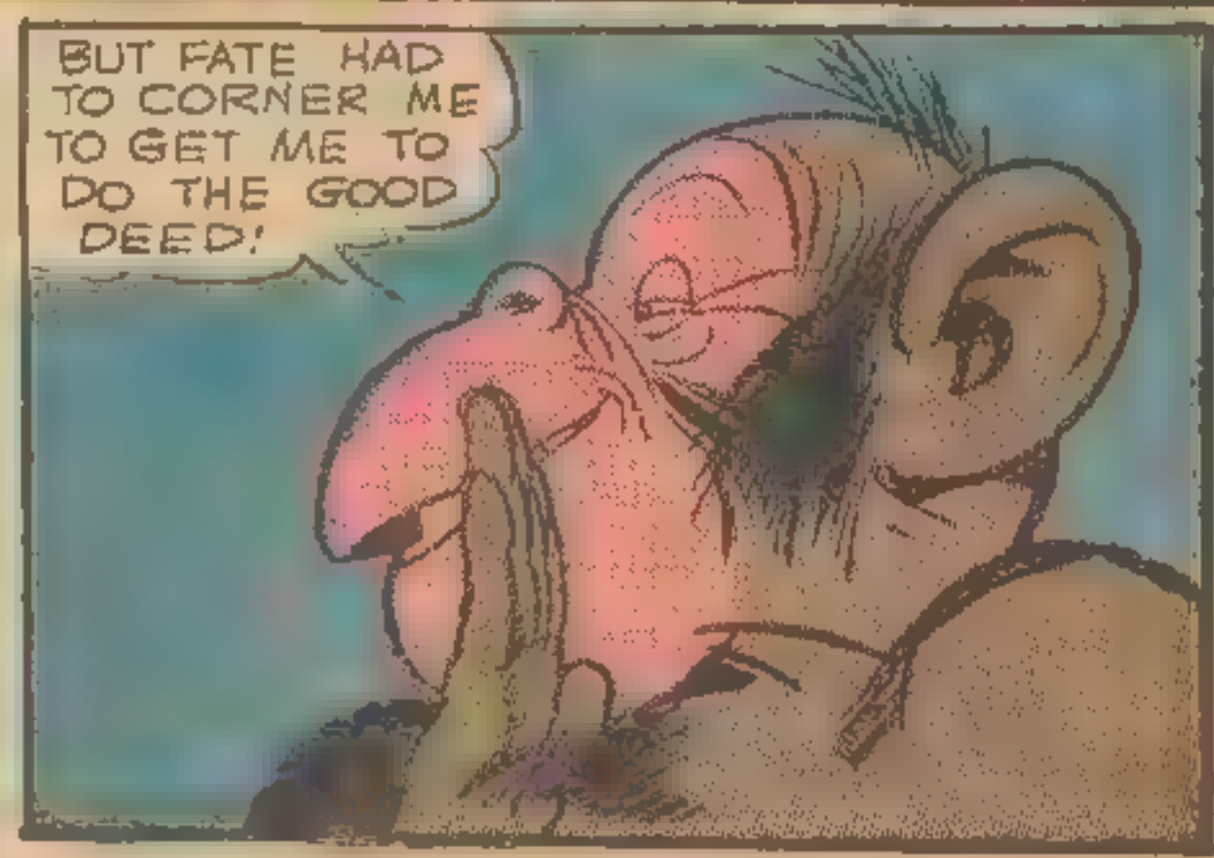
POOR POP! HE DIDN'T HAVE A CHANCE AGAINST THAT SHARK!
THAT'S THE LAST WE SAW OF HIM— SWIMMING LIKE MAD, AND THE SHARK GAIN-ING!



DO YOU SUPPOSE THE SHARK SWALLOWED HIM WHOLE, OR DID—
I'M IN ONE PIECE— AND THESE ARE OUR NEW FRIENDS HERE'S YOUR SHARE OF THE HONEY

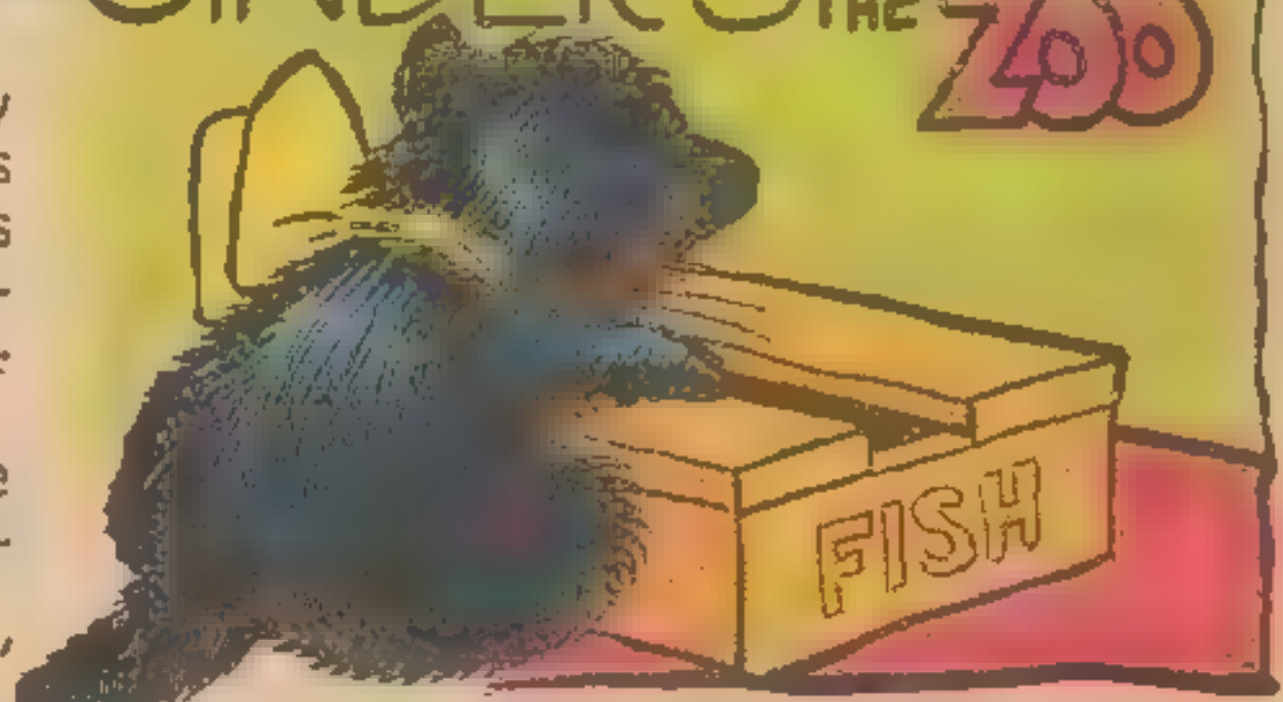


OH, POP, WE HAD GIVEN UP HOPE! WE THOUGHT WE WOULD NEVER SEE YOU AGAIN.
WELL, MY LUCK CHANGED WHEN I DID A GOOD DEED—



BUT FATE HAD TO CORNER ME TO GET ME TO DO THE GOOD DEED!

CINDERS SURPRISES THE ZOO



Copr 1946 by R. S. CALLENDER

Cinders was a fat, roly-poly, fluffy little kitten. His fur coat was just as soft as silk and as black as coal. His little eyes sparkled like two hot cinders. In fact, that was why he was called Cinders.

One day Cinders was sitting on the edge of the lawn when the fish peddler's cart stopped near by.

"Mmmmm, what a very nice smell," thought Cinders. "I think I will go over just a little tiny bit closer." And then, even though his mother had told him not to leave the lawn, Cinders went over a little closer and sniffed; and then he moved a little closer until he was right beside the fish cart.

"Well," said Cinders, "as long as I'm here, I may as well hop up into the cart. It wouldn't hurt any."

"My," said Cinders, "what a lot of fish! And there's a big crack in this box, too. I think I'll just take a fish out and look at it. It wouldn't hurt any!"

So he put his paw through the crack and took hold of a fish, and he tugged and tugged and he pulled and pulled He was so busy pulling and tugging that he didn't notice the cart was driving away. He was so busy, he didn't even notice that he had loosened the lid on the box until, "plop," he was down in the middle of all of the fish.

Now that was the nicest thing that could ever have happened to a little kitten like Cinders, because he loved fish better than anything else in the world. So right away he started nibbling. And he nibbled and nibbled. He was so busy nibbling that he didn't notice the cart had stopped until he found himself being dumped out together with the fish.

"Hey!" said a strange voice "What are you doing in my dinner? You're no fish!"

"What a big pollywog you are!" exclaimed Cinders.

"A pollywog! I'll have you know I'm the largest seal in the zoo!" stammered the seal. "And what are you?"

"A cat, of course," replied Cinders.

"If you're a cat you should eat with the cats and leave my fish alone," said the seal irritably; and with that he put his nose under Cinders little stomach and flipped him right up into the air and down into the lion's cage.

Well! Little Cinders was so surprised that he forgot to be frightened when he looked up and saw the big lion standing there. Cinders said, "I'm to eat with the cats! Are you a cat? You don't look like a cat!"

"Ho ho ho!" laughed the lion. "Am I a cat? I'm the biggest cat in the whole world!"

"I'm a cat, too," said Cinders. "I'm supposed to eat with you Where are the fish?"

"Fish?" asked the lion "Ho ho. I don't eat fish I eat little cats like you." And then he let out a tremendous roar.

My, but Cinders was frightened! He had never heard such a noise He ran out of the lion's cage, and by the leopard's cage, and by the tiger's cage, and by where the monkeys were playing, and all the way home.

Poor Cinders! He didn't know the lion was just making fun of him. But the leopard and the tiger and the monkeys knew, and they just laughed and laughed until their sides ached, because it was really a good joke the lion had played on Cinders. The lion really wouldn't have eaten him, because he was a very kind old lion. Besides he had no teeth and had to live on ground meat and mush.
